Re: CS Docket No. 95-184

Dear Jane:

I wanted to get back to you quickly on your question regarding the authority of the Commission to apply its "fresh look" policy to cable perpetual contracts. Although we agree that the Commission should normally avoid regulating private contractual relationships, when, as in the case of cable perpetual contracts, there has been a clear market failure and incumbent providers are using perpetual contracts to extend and perpetuate monopolies, we believe that it is altogether fitting and proper for the Commission to prohibit such anticompetitive behavior and to proscribe such contracts.

The Commission previously has imposed "fresh look" obligations on dominant providers to prevent them from using their market power in anticompetitive ways.<sup>1</sup> "Fresh look" allows customers committed to long-term contracts with an entrenched monopolist to take a fresh look at the marketplace once competition is introduced and to escape those contracts if they so desire with little or no termination liability. This approach "makes it easier for an incumbent provider's established customers to consider taking service from a new entrant.... [and] obtain...the benefits of the new, more competitive...environment."<sup>2</sup>

The Commission has ample authority to apply its "fresh look" policy in this context. In the early days of cable television, cable operators were coercing communities into perpetual franchises and cable television service was "tend[ing] to develop on a noncompetitive, monopolistic basis in the areas served."<sup>3</sup> The Commission concluded that perpetual and "extremely long (i.e. 99-year) franchises .... are an invitation to obsolescence."<sup>4</sup> Thus, based on its authority under Sections 2 and 4(i) of the Communications Act, the Commission responded to this market failure by requiring franchising authorities to place a "reasonable limit" of fifteen years on the duration of cable franchises.<sup>5</sup>

The situation with regard to MDU perpetual contracts is analogous. Unless cable customers are permitted to escape contracts of unlimited duration that were executed at a time before competitive alternatives became available in the market, subscribers in these MDUs will forever be at the mercy of the franchised cable operators. This result would be inconsistent with the Commission's responsibility to see that all the people of the United States have available "rapid, efficient ... wire and radio communication service with adequate facilities at reasonable charges."<sup>6</sup>

Since the time of the 1972 franchise term limits, the Commission has been given additional authority to regulate cable services under Title VI. The Commission now is required to ensure that the rates charged to subscribers by cable systems not subject to effective competition are reasonable.<sup>7</sup> In addition, the Commission has been given oversight responsibilities with regard to local franchising under Section 621.<sup>8</sup> Thus, under Section 4(i), which grants the Commission "authority reasonably ancillary to the effective performance of [these] responsibilities,"<sup>9</sup> the Commission may impose "fresh look" obligations on franchised cable operators.

Finally, application of the "fresh look" policy to the perpetual service contracts of franchised cable operators would help the Commission to fulfill its obligations under Section 257 of the Communications Act, added by the Telecommunications Act of 1996, which requires that the Commission identify and eliminate market entry barriers for entrepreneurs and small businesses.<sup>10</sup> Only by

Once again, thank you for your time, and I hope that we have future opportunities to discuss these and other issues.
